Description

At The Workplace Company we pride ourselves on our professional but friendly approach to office agency. We see offices as more than just a place you go to work. Finding the right premises for your business is crucial for harbouring a productive and enjoyable environment for you and your staff. We also understand the importance of getting the best lease terms on any property that you acquire. After staff costs, property is likely to represent the next largest overhead for most businesses and should therefore be considered in the same way – as a valuable asset. We base our advice on this principle and work closely with our clients to develop and implement strategies that maximise the value of their property assets. We place great emphasis on listening to our clients, understanding their needs and the business drivers behind property decisions, we aim to see the whole picture and maximise opportunities presented by any given situation while minimising liabilities and risks. Underlying The Workplace Company ethos is our drive to provide advice of the highest possible standard but to do so in a friendly and easy to understand manner. We have recognised that professional services are often delivered in a way that clouds the transparency we believe is so important. As one of London's most active property agents, we're here to help you do exactly that. The rental market is changing, and the last thing you want is for your building to sit empty for months. The good news is, we've
